

Divided God

Project of intercultural dialog

January 2007 - Jun 2008

Berlin, Istanbul, Ljubljana, Mostar, Novi sad

Project Description

Research will be substantiated by the participation of experts from the fields of humanities and intercultural studies providing their expertise and mentorship, by anthropological-sociological video research and by interactive media and website communication.

The final results – the proposed goals of the project will be:

an interactive and inter-media web page that will contain updated results of the theoretical and practical research and will keep track of the development of the project, a publication that will publish theoretical contributions of the experts, thoughts and opinions of the participants and the whole breadth of the conducted research along with the complete results of the project, a video-documentary and other shorter video creations that will be the product of the research-based video workshops taking place in the countries and cities of the partners participating in the project.

Methodology of work

Preparation/introduction: setting up theoretical frames of the project through e-communication and definition of concrete problems in specific areas.

Organising the exchange of the young collaborators - video researchers in the project-participating cities - and organising round tables with young participants in the project, academic experts, etc.

Video research in participating cities where, besides the general questions and research themes, more specific research will be done on 'problems' that are present in specific surroundings.

Evaluation and editing of publication on theoretical/empirical issues. Presentation of the final outcomes of the project - video documentary and publication.

Target groups and audience

The primary target group is young people, aged 15 – 30. Young people of this age will also prevail in the part of the group that will actively participate the project.

The opinions and perspectives of this target group are particularly important because they provide the potential way into finding possibilities and opportunities for a different approach to addressing problems concerning religious and cultural tolerance in the future.

Objectives - short term

To probe and collect opinions, experiences and standpoints of young people regarding religious and cultural tolerance, co-existence and co-operation with those who have different cultural backgrounds and religious beliefs.

To explore differing opinions about specific ethnic and religious conflicts through theoretical discussion and analysis.

To examine, and shed light on the problems of specific conflict situations, to analyse their context and aetiology, and, consequently, to consider possible lines of resolution.

To address issues of religious and cultural difference in Europe at present through discussion and debate, publication and, particularly, through the use of documentary film, and, on this basis, to raise the awareness of inter-ethnic and inter-religious social contexts and issues.

To contribute to the formation of adequate approaches and methods for intercultural communication and cooperation that would, crucially, be of practical use in everyday learning situations.

TOG (Community Volunteers Foundation) as a PARTNER ORGANIZATION

Community Volunteers Foundation (CVF) is established in December 2002. Since its foundation CVF has reached 12.000 young volunteers and 500+ adult volunteers. CVF has realized more than 800 local and national projects, has provided 595 trainings to its volunteers, opened 4 Youth Service Centers and 3 Local Coordination Centers, and provides 397 university students with scholarships with the active participation of young volunteers and assistance of adult volunteers.
